Prairie Dog funds can be used for County Road Infrastructure, however cannot be used as a pledge for funds. Weber reported that the interim program he was trying to utilize did not work out. Weber will consider hiring high school help for the summer.

Michelle Gilley presented the Commissioners with a garden project design at the Extension office. Also presenting was Tiffany Munson and Shirley Myhre on behalf of the Extension office and 4-H. Funding needs were discussed for the growing 4-H program, specifically a need for additional pens for livestock, estimated at $6,200. The static building needs a remodel in order to be used for a year-round meeting facility, archery in winter, shooting sports, etc. The Extension Office staff is actively seeking funds in the community, and it was noted that Eddy County cannot contribute financially directly to 4-H. Gilley requested a letter of support from the Commissioners to attest to the funding needs of future projects.

At 9:00 A.M. Chairperson Allmaras opened the Public Hearing scheduled regarding the Resolution to Redesignate County Auditor's and Treasurer's Offices to Appointed.

Monty Schaefer, a member of the Upper Sheyenne Joint Water Resource Board addressed the Commission with concerns and questions regarding funding and jurisdiction on the Red Bridge Crossing in Freeborn Township. Schaefer gave a brief history on the Red Bridge Crossing and reported that the State may have funding available to improve the crossing, but would need a perpetual easement agreement in place. This agreement would be between the landowners who own the land that the existing road is on (both to the North and to the South of the Red Bridge) and Freeborn Township. Schaefer will continue to report information to the Commissioners as developed.

Strategies to protect your goals from consistent inflation

If you're like most investors, you've noticed the impact of higher inflation in recent years - whether at the gas pump or the grocery store. American investors are experiencing the effects of prolonged inflation for the first time since the early 1980s. As a result, many are concerned about how inflation levels will impact their ability to reach their long-term financial goals. While it may not be possible to avoid the effects of inflation altogether, there are several strategies investors can utilize to mitigate the impact of inflation on their financial plan. Here are three investment considerations that may help address inflation concerns and better prepare your goals for long-term success.

1 - Keep your money invested

When the inflation rate soared in 2022, stock and bond markets declined. Some investors responded by pulling money out of the market. This can be counterproductive as investors too often miss much of a market's recovery gain before they put their money back to work. For example, the U.S. stock market (as measured by the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, an unmanaged index of stocks often used as a benchmark of market performance), declined 25 percent between January and October 2022. But by the end of 2023, the S&P 500 regained nearly all of the ground lost in the bear market. It is normal for markets to go through ups and downs. Investors that stay the course and keep their money invested commonly see their investments make up gains that were lost in a sudden downturn. While it may be tempting to remove yourself from the market during volatile periods, it could be helpful to stay invested at a level that reflects your risk tolerance.

2 - If time is on your side, take advantage of stocks

Over time, stocks have historically outpaced inflation, an important consideration as you try to build wealth to achieve your ultimate financial goals with more confidence. This doesn't mean that year-in, year-out, stocks will keep you ahead of inflation. The year 2022 is a good example stocks declining as inflation rose. But if you have time to let your money work for you, stocks have historically outpaced the rise in living costs. According to data collected since 1871, stocks have grown faster than inflation for holding periods of 20 years or more. Investors who can ride the highs and lows of markets are often better suited to keep up, if not pass, the rate of inflation.

3 - For short-term money, seek higher yields

You may have money set aside for short-term needs, such as your emergency fund or to cover upcoming expenses. In these times of elevated inflation, you'll want to find ways to earn more competitive yields on your short-term savings. Search out options such as money market funds, CDs, short-term U.S. Treasury securities and other savings vehicles that offer yields that may keep pace with inflation. Utilizing these tools may allow you to stay more liquid with your investments while hedging against the impacts of inflation.

Whether an economic cycle brings conventional or elevated inflation it should be considered as a factor of your long-term financial plan. A financial advisor can help develop a comprehensive strategy that addresses the inflation environment today and over the long term.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Vote for no more than ONE name		This initiated measure would add a new article to the North Dakota Constitution. Under the measure, no person may be elected or appointed to serve any portion of a term representing North Dakota in the U.S. Senate or the U.S. House of Representatives if that person could be 81 years old by December 31 of the year immediately preceding the end of the term, and any such person is prohibited from appearing on the ballot. If a superior law requires age-limited candidates to appear on the ballot in a primary or general election, the candidates' age on December 31 of the year immediately preceding the end of the term they are seeking must be printed next to the names of all candidates for all federal legislative offices in future elections. The article also requires the Attorney General to zealously defend Section 4 of the article in the courts of this state or of the United States. The article would become effective immediately upon approval by the voters. If the measure conflicts with any other provision of the state constitution, the measure states it would prevail over the other constitutional provisions.
